Ather Energy's Q4 revenue soars 74%; losses narrow 57% on scale gains

DRIVING FORCE. Growth continues to be driven by sales of electric two-wheelers and related services

Our Bureau
Bengaluru

Electric two-wheeler maker Ather Energy reported a strong close to FY26, with operating revenue rising 74 per cent year-on-year in the March quarter, even as losses more than halved on the back of scale gains and tighter cost controls.

The Bengaluru-based company posted operating revenue of ₹1,175 crore in Q4 FY26, up from ₹676 crore a year earlier, according to its quarterly disclosure. Net loss for the quarter narrowed 57 per cent to ₹100 crore.

Ather's revenue continues to be driven entirely by sales

SALES VOLUME. The company sold about 79,251 vehicles during the quarter of electric two-wheelers and related services. The company sold about

79,251 vehicles during the quarter, though it did not provide a detailed revenue split across products and services.

Including ₹39 crore from non-operating income, total income for the quarter stood at ₹1,214 crore. For the full year FY26, Ather reported a 63 per cent increase in operating revenue, while losses reduced nearly 37 per cent to ₹517 crore from ₹817 crore in the previous fiscal, indicating a steady move towards profitability.

COST SIDE

On the cost side, material expenses — primarily battery packs and other components — remained the largest contributor, accounting for 69 per cent of total spending. These costs rose 61 per cent year-on-year to ₹905 crore in Q4. Employee benefit expenses increased 17 per cent to ₹127 crore.

Overall expenses climbed to ₹1,314 crore in the quarter, up from ₹922 crore a year ago, driven by higher depreciation, amortisation and continued investments in legal, advertising and other overheads.

Despite the rise in costs, revenue growth outpaced expenditure, helping the company significantly pare losses during the quarter. According to Vahan data, Ather retained its third position in April, even as registrations declined 20 per cent month-on-month to 27,024 units from 36,136 units in March.

The fundraise is in the form of a primary capital raise of around ₹350 crore and a secondary share sale of around ₹120 crore, ahead of the company's proposed initial public offering (IPO).

The entire investment was led by Jongsong Investments, marking a significant institutional endorsement for Milky Mist.

into equity shares on a 1:1 basis prior to listing.

Additionally, promoters Sathishkumar T and Anitha S sold 89,43,903 equity shares at ₹139.76 per share, aggregating to roughly ₹125 crore, as part of a secondary transaction.

SEBI GO-AHEAD

The firm obtained SEBI approval for its ₹2,035 crore IPO in October 2025, and recently told businessline that it is evaluating the market conditions and looking for the "right opportunity" to kick off the listing.

The IPO is definitely on track, K Rathnam, CEO and Whole-time Director, Milky Mist Dairy Food, had told businessline last month. The SEBI approval expires in October this year.

As part of the primary issuance, Milky Mist allotted 5,43,789 equity shares at ₹139.76 per share, aggregating to about ₹7.6 crore, the public notice showed.

Pixxel, Sarvam plan orbital data centre satellite by Q4

Our Bureau
Bengaluru

Spacetech start-up Pixxel has partnered with Sarvam AI to develop what they claim will be India's first orbital data centre satellite, marking a push to take AI compute infrastructure beyond terrestrial limits.

Under the partnership, Pixxel will design, build, launch and operate the 'Pathfinder' satellite, while Sarvam will provide the AI backbone, enabling both training and inference directly in orbit through full-stack language models running onboard.

EMERGING MARKET

The 200 kg-class Pathfinder satellite is targeted for launch as early as the fourth quarter of 2026, signalling the companies' intent to move quickly in what they see as an emerging market for space-based computing.

Unlike conventional satellites that rely on low-power edge processors, Pathfinder will host datacentre-class GPUs — similar to those used in ground-based AI infrastructure — allowing high-performance computing in space.

The satellite will also carry Pixxel's hyperspectral imaging camera, enabling it to capture high-fidelity Earth observation data and process it in orbit using foundation models.

This would allow the system to analyse imagery in real time — identifying patterns and detecting changes — without transmitting large volumes of raw data back to Earth, significantly reducing latency in decision-making.

The companies said this approach could have applications across environmental monitoring, resource management and critical infrastructure tracking, as it enables satellites to generate insights directly rather than serving only as data collection systems.

Awais Ahmed, Chief Executive of Pixxel, said increasing constraints around energy, land and regulation are making ground-based data centres harder to scale, positioning orbital infrastructure as a potential alternative powered by solar energy and closer to space-based data sources.

For Sarvam, the collaboration extends its full-stack sovereign AI platform into space, with India-built models running directly on satellite-based compute infrastructure without reliance on foreign cloud systems.

AI INFRASTRUCTURE

Pratyush Kumar, Chief Executive of Sarvam, said the partnership reflects the need for India to build and control its own AI infrastructure, including in orbit.

The mission will test real-time AI inference and data processing in space conditions, including performance, power management and thermal constraints, laying the groundwork for future orbital data centre systems.

The satellite will be developed at Pixxel's upcoming Gigapixel facility, which is being set up to scale satellite production to up to 100 units annually.
